

The Far
Flung Battle Fronts of Warring Europe

A Trail of Devastation
From Arras
to Macedonia

A Macedonian village, occupied by the Allies, set afire by incendiary bombs from German warplanes.
Photo copyright by Underwood & Underwood.

Macedonian refugees that have sought safety and succor under the wing of the Entente Allies' forces.

On the Macedonian front with Sar-rail's troops. The country offers little for the support of an army.

Photo by Central News Photo Service.

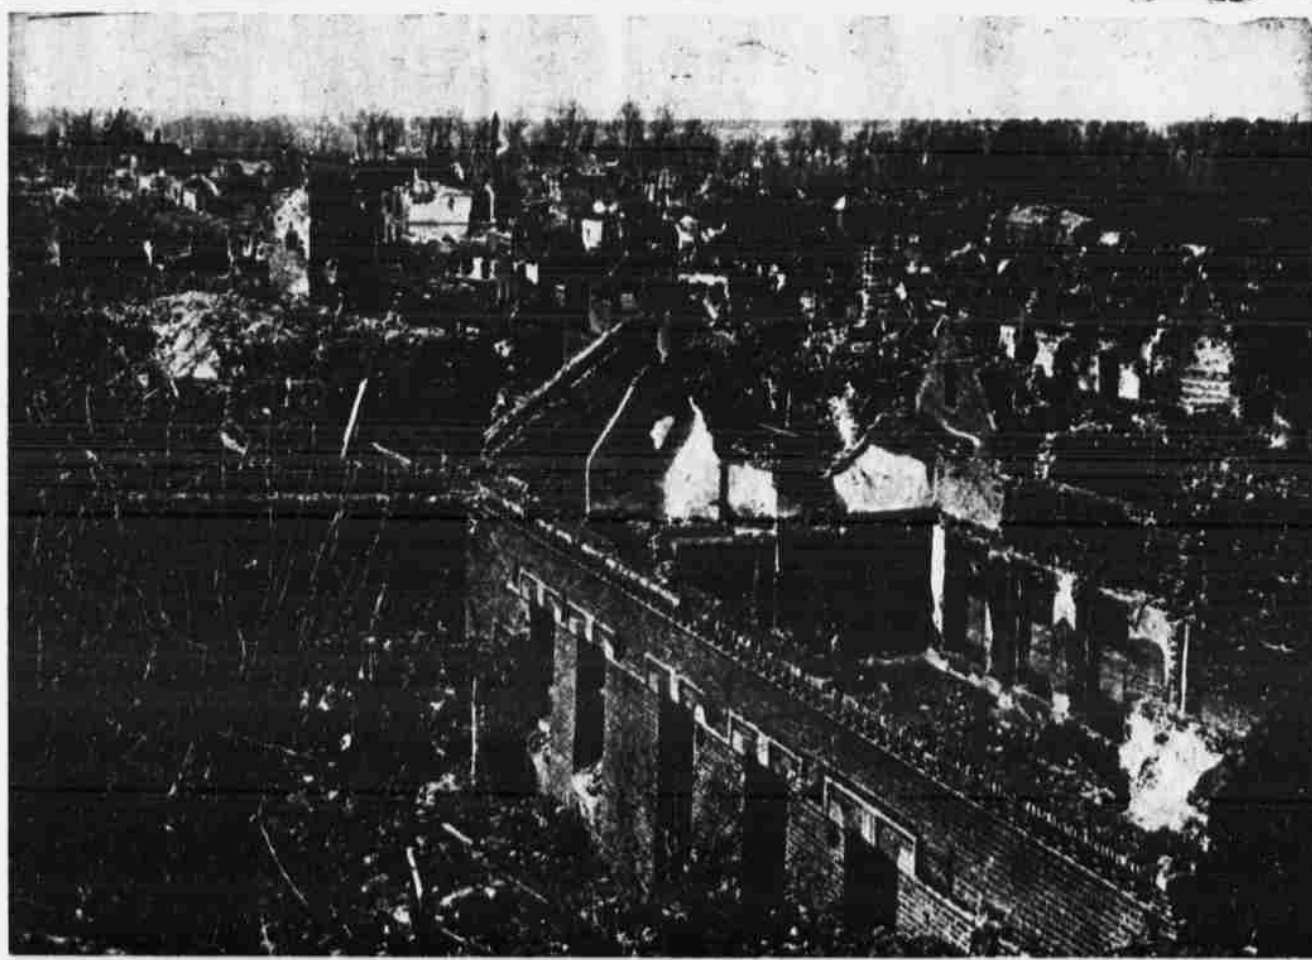

Hindo-Chinese laborers brought by France from far away Tonkin to raise vegetables in the environs of Versailles.

French soldiers of the first line attacking enemy trenches with hand grenades to clear the way for a massed assault.

[Pictorial Press.

As the British found Feuchy after they forced the retreat of the German troops, long established there.

All that is left of the erstwhile beautiful Hotel de Ville at Arras, but lately captured by Haig's men.